Questions Comments:

I have been following the the story of the Hog operation on big creek for several years now and how it is and will continue to affect the water quality for all who live in the area and also the visitors to the area. I for one used to visit the Buffalo river but have decided to cease that activity because of the possible contamination that my family and myself could be exposed to with the practices that are taking place there. Why do you think that the operation of the hog facility is so good for the area. What little anyone gains from it will be lost in costs to clean up the effects of that activity in the region. I for one will not return to that area until I see notice on The BRA website that the Hog operations permit has been revoked or not renewed. Locals benefit from visitors to the area. I will also not tell anyone I know to visit the area and why not to visit. So much for Tourism dollars flowing int that area. Who benefits from the Hog facility? Who will be responsible for cleaning it up? Think about it. Thank you, Richard Brown
