

Road to Nashville show coming to Hot Springs soon

Road to Nashville, a show which promises to be one of the best to come to Hot Springs this year, will be presented at the Hot Springs Convention Center May 2. The show, sponsored by the Fun City Chorus, will feature a competition for local high school students competing for a chance to travel to Nashville to record a song of their own in a real studio.

Also featured in the show are two super talented performers with local ties, Trey Stevens of Malvern and Susan Erwin of Magnet Cove, in addition to the Fun City Men's Chorus.

Stevens, who will emcee the show, is a songwriter/performer based out of Nashville, TN. Throughout his music career, Trey has performed with country acts such as Gloriana, Jason Boland, Kevin Fowler, Chris Knight and has shared the stage with some legendary songwriters including Earl Bud Lee (who wrote Friends in Low Places). Stevens is currently writing in Nashville and is expected to have a single released in the near future. The song, co written by Stevens and J. Michael Harter, is expected to be released by Harter very soon. J. Michael Harter is a Nashville Artist, pushing his way back into the country music scene after a stint with Broken Bow Records in the early 2000s.

Erwin, a dynamic stage performer hailing from Magnet Cove, is a singer, songwriter and multi-instrumentalist who, with her stage presence and rare ability to make every person in her audience feel part of the show, has become an international performer in great demand. She has performed nationwide, from the east coast to Branson to Las Vegas to L.A., in addition to tours in Europe and the Caribbean. She is also a talented artist, with her works available in galleries and online. She has recently released her first album titled "Painting You Gone", with all songs written or co-written by Susan. For more information about Susan, visit her website: www.susanerwin.com

The Fun City Men's Chorus, under the direction of Steve Spakes, is a group of approximately 40 men who perform in and around Hot Springs. They are affiliated with the Barbershop Harmony Society and support the community in many ways, including their successful and growing music scholarship program.

The competition will feature 9 local high school students, selected by their respective school music directors, performing a song of their choosing. The winner will be chosen by a panel of 5 talented judges, and there will be a "People's Choice Award" selected by the audience.

This outstanding show will be presented Saturday, May 2nd at 7:00 P.M. Tickets are available for $15 online at funicitychorus.org, by phone at 501-624-6100, or in The Village at 501-922-5805.

Colorguard bake sale scheduled

A bake sale fund raiser will be held for the Mineral Springs band color guard Fri., May 1 at the Diamond Bank branch in Mineral Springs starting at 3:30 p.m., and they will also host a yard sale at the city's former rail depot on Runnels St. the following day beginning at 8 a.m.

All funds from the events will be used to purchase equipment and costumes for the guard for the 2015-2016 season.

Federal suit refiled against city of Nashville

NASHVILLE - A $1.15 million lawsuit against the city of Nashville has been refiled in federal court after having been dismissed a year ago.

The suit claims that actions taken by the city fire department during the fighting of a fire on Main St. in Nashville in 2008 which resulted in the demolition of a building owned by the plaintiffs in the case, Carl and Justin Johnson, "constituted a 'seizure' of their property", and thus violated their Fifth and Fourteenth Amendment rights, and names not only the city, but also Nashville fire marshal Jerry Harwell, former Mayor Mike Reese, current and former "city counsel members" Freddy

Brown, Matt Smith, Jackie Harwell, Nick Davis, Monica Clark, Vivian Wright, Jimmie Lou Kirkpatrick, Kay Gathright, James Parker, Carol Mitchell, Andy Anderson and Mike Milum, as well as current mayor Billy Ray Jones, who had no position with the city at the time of the incident referenced in the suit, and TOMCO, Inc. as a contractor of the city.

The suit alleges that the structure owned by the two was destroyed after the fire was extinguished and that the building was structurally sound when Harwell, as fire marshal, ordered it demolished. They seek $224,985, which they say is the replacement cost of the building, as well as an additional $928,320 which they claim was the "fair market value" of the resale shop's inventory, in addition to court costs and attorney's fees. A report filed with the Arkansas State Police characterized such controlled demolitions of structures involved in disasters as "standard safety procedure."

The Johnsons filed a motion to voluntarily dismiss the case without prejudice on April 2 of last year in the Western District of Arkansas and re-filed on March 30 of this year, according to court records. This will make the second time the case has been dismissed and re-filed, each time with different attorneys representing the plaintiffs. Originally the case was filed by Little Rock attorney Morgan E. Welch, then by Hot Springs lawyer Ralph C. Ohm. The Johnson's current representation is by Sammie Strange and Melissa Grisham of the Hosto & Buchan firm of Little Rock, according to the most recent filing. City council members reached for reaction had no comment, as did former mayor Mike Reese.
