When I first heard about the CAFO that is located on Big Creek I found it hard to believe. Oh I know the basic plan of how the lagoon pond system is supposed to work, in a perfect world. But 6 miles from a national treasure? The Buffalo River is a rare gem and the risk of spoiling this with hog poop was a mistake as I see it. Now I also know a lot of money was spent on this CAFO, that the hog farmers work hard, and that they should get to earn money from this hog factory. But 6 miles from The Buffalo River?

I do believe it is just a matter of time before there is contamination of Big Creek and therefore the Buffalo. If it isn'tof going on already, in this area of Karst. Since the mistake has been made, then perhaps the hog factory could be relocated, before the bigger mistake of contamination happens.

I do not think this permit should be granted again. I want to enjoy the Buffalo for the rest of my life and teach my grandchildren to do the same.

Thank you,
