Questions_Comments:

If your mission is to protect the environment, please reconsider allowing C&H farms from building a hog confinement on the Buffalo River. My experience with large hog confinements has been extremely negative. I am originally from Iowa and once a large confinement is permitted they proliferate. The odor is intense and the commitment to protecting the land and streams is very low. Once, the hog confinement is no longer viable the mess is left behind and the surrounding area suffers the consequences. Citizens, and those charged with protecting our natural beauty and resources, should be extremely cautious about hog confinements. Please consider not allowing C&H to build their confinement so close to a stream that feeds into the Buffalo, one of our most prized possessions.
