Stapleton Metals To Stop Production; Close Doors

Stapleton Metals, located on Mills Road in Clarksville, is closing its doors the week of Oct. 1 when the balance of remaining inventory is shipped out, said Bob Bean. Employees have spent the last few days fabricating product with inventory on hand, advised Bean.

Owner Bob Lensing stated employees were notified in May of the plant closing and expressed his appreciation for those employees who remained through the closing process.

The plant closing is a result of Stapleton's product being outsourced to a foreign country, added Lensing who stated the Van Buren plant will only serve as a distribution center with the accompanying departments such as accounting remaining.

An auction may be held in the future for fixtures and equipment at the Clarksville plant which produced ladders. Lensing stated that some of the equipment includes stamping equipment, injection molding equipment, tube benders and other fabrication equipment.

The Clarksville plant was opened in 1992 and at the height of manufacturing, the Clarksville plant employed around 40 people, said Lensing and is now downsized to eight employees. Employees being laid off or already laid off will receive assistance through state programs which offer retraining and other special education benefits. One of the benefits is providing 104 weeks of school with full unemployment benefits, stated Bean.

"We've always had a good relationship with the city and community and hate to be leaving," said Lensing. "It's a sign of the times and manufacturing is a tough business." Lensing added that he had fought closing down the manufacturing operation in the face of foreign competition, but in the end, the company had no choice.
