

Dear Mrs. Szenher,

Large animal operations that confine large numbers of animals in order to produce food for consumers, including those living in distant counties, can hardly be considered "family farms." They are manufacturing plants and must be subject to stringent rules related to health and safety. Further, effluent from pigs and the associated odor is obnoxious. Allowing a CAFO near our Buffalo River in the Ozarks was a mistake that must not happen, again.

Sincerely, Neil Matthews
