I am completely at a loss to understand how Arkansas is not immediately taking the opportunity to classify streams flowing into the Buffalo River as polluted as recommended by the National Park Service.

Any light you can shed on why in the world this would not be done immediately would be appreciated. If there is a different person that should be contacted, by all means please let me know.

I intend to speak to the best person to answer this question and can call an any time that is convenient this week. I would hope that most Arkansans would be on the same page, but it appears that politics may be interfering.

Thanks,
